KANSAS LEGISLATIVE INSIGHTS NEWSLETTER | JANUARY 14, 2022

January 14, 2022

SESSION OPENS

The 2022 Kansas Legislature is now underway with committees getting organized and receiving briefings on the issues coming before their committee. Gov. Laura Kelly's State of the State address proposed eliminating the sales tax on food, freezing college tuition rates, investing in law enforcement, a $250 one-time rebate to resident taxpayers, and fully funding the state water plan. This is all done through proposing a fiscally prudent budget that eliminates many accounting gimmicks while including a rainy-day fund. Gov. Kelly used her election-year State of the State address to remind Kansans about the creation of 30,000 new jobs and more than $7.6 billion invested in Kansas by businesses during her administration despite a pandemic. Predictably, the Republicans in attendance were restrained in their response, while the Democrats were exhibiting strong support.

On Wednesday, the governor's budget was released and presented to the budget committees who are starting to look at the details. The redistricting process has started with both the House and Senate Redistricting Committees conducting their initial meetings and reviewing the process. The reality that more legislative seats will need to be moved from rural areas to urban areas will become more apparent when the initial redistricting maps for the Kansas House and Senate are released.

While the opening week of legislative sessions generally opens slowly, there was one notable exception addressing the damage caused by the recent wildfires with prefiled bills in both the House and Senate. Both the House and Senate Tax Committees conducted hearings on their respective bills this week. The Senate version is Senate Bill 318, introduced by Sens. Elaine Bowers (R-Concordia), Rick Billinger (R-Goodland), and Caryn Tyson (R-Parker), providing a sales tax exemption for purchases to reconstruct, repair, or replace certain fencing damaged or destroyed by wildfires. Senate Tax Committee Chair Caryn Tyson fast-tracked the measure with a hearing yesterday and committee approval with two amendments. One amendment allows county commissions to temporarily stop collecting property tax on burned buildings. The second provides that the tax exemption be retroactive to 2019 to assist tornado victims. The House Tax Committee held a hearing on its bill on Wednesday and will continue its hearings next week.

There have only been a handful of bills introduced each day this week. The Legislature will not meet on Monday in recognition of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday. The committee meeting schedule is relatively light next week.

GOVERNOR'S BUDGET PROPOSAL FOR $2.9 BILLION SURPLUS

On Wednesday, Gov. Laura Kelly's budget proposal was presented by her budget director, Adam Proffitt, to a joint meeting of the House Appropriations Committee and the Senate Ways and Means Committee. The governor's approach to the surplus is saving millions in future interest costs by paying $586 million in bonds early and would avoid issuing $224 million in new bonding to cover proposed building projects. The $586 million in debt retirement includes a $253 million payment to cover skipped state contributions to the Kansas Public Employees Retirement System (KPERs) to be repaid over many years. The governor's budget proposed to pay other debt, including $160 million the state owes for dredging at John Redmond Reservoir and construction of a building at KU Medical Center in Kansas City. Further, the governor recommended early repayment of $171 million in bonds for the National Bio and Agro-Defense Facility in Manhattan.

Gov. Kelly's proposal to eliminate the state sales tax on grocery purchases is projected to cost $450 million in lost tax revenue. The budget proposes a one-time $250 rebate to resident tax filers. The budget proposal includes a 5% raise for state employees while continuing to invest in education, mental health, and public safety. Finally, the governor proposed Medicaid expansion for low-income Kansans, which is unlikely to pass.

Proffitt told the budget committees that Gov. Kelly was committed to eliminating accounting tricks and gimmicks that have masked state financial problems in past budgets. For example, her budget would eliminate annual raids on the state highway fund. The reduction in taxes, eliminating interest payments, and avoiding debt was greeted with bipartisan support. The Democratic governor's proposal is only the starting point for budget discussions. Ultimately, the Republican Legislature will modify the governor's proposals.

STATE OF THE JUDICIARY ADDRESS

On Tuesday, Kansas Chief Justice Marla Luckert addressed a joint session of the House and Senate with an update on how the courts functioned during the pandemic. Justice Luckert requested funding for 13 new district judges and 10 more district magistrate judges. She thanked legislators for the 5% raises approved last session for the Judiciary in Fiscal Years 2022 and 2023 and requested that they be kept in place. She reported that Kansas judges are generally earning about $30,000 a year less than similar judges in other states. Justice Luckert noted the courts are using new procedures and technology, making them more responsive to Kansans.

REDISTRICTING PROCESS UNDERWAY

This week both the House and Senate Redistricting Committees had organizational meetings and reviewed the redistricting process. The House committee approved the guidelines they will be using for redistricting. Things will become more interesting in the House committee next week with deliberations on the Congressional boundary lines. House Chair Rep. Chris Croft asked any member to bring proposed Congressional maps next Tuesday for committee discussion. He has tentatively announced three days of committee meetings next week with possible committee action next Friday on the Congressional map.
