PROFILE

Tara Eberline serves as partner-in-charge of Foulston's Kansas City office. As an employment defense attorney, Tara counsels employers and defends clients in employment disputes of all kinds. At her core, Tara is a problem-solver who thrives on assisting her clients in meeting their business goals. She advises cities and counties, business owners, managers, general counsel, and human resources professionals and is a trusted resource for strategic decisions regarding potential, current, and former employee issues.

When disputes arise, Tara represents her clients before state and federal agencies and defends clients in all stages of litigation involving workplace harassment, discrimination, retaliation, and other employment-related lawsuits. Her clients have obtained favorable summary judgment rulings, trial verdicts, appellate rulings, and settlements that have avoided prolonged litigation.

Tara has also successfully represented both employers and employees in sensitive and often fast-moving disputes regarding non-compete and non-solicitation agreements. In this evolving area of the law, Tara provides her clients with both legal and practical advice and tailors her negotiation and litigation strategy to reach her clients' business goals.

Tara is a frequent and sought-after speaker and trainer on employment law-related topics for civic groups, associations, and clients. She was recognized in 2023 and 2025 by Best Lawyers® as the Employment Law – Management "Lawyer of the Year" in the Kansas City, Kansas area; and the 2025 Kansas City, Kansas area Litigation - Municipal "Lawyer of the Year."

Outside of her law practice, Tara loves baking with her three children, traveling with her husband, and volunteering throughout the Kansas City community.
