Emerging Ethical Challenges in AI, DEI, and Cybersecurity

This session will tackle a trifecta of emerging issues, exploring the ethical challenges of cybersecurity, artificial intelligence (AI), and diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI):

AI: In follow-up to last year's ethics seminar, AI in the workplace remains an evolving area with legal risks and a duty to balance innovation with ethical considerations, including client confidentiality and communication with clients about the use of AI. We will explore best practices for responsible AI in legal practice.

Cybersecurity: In a world where cyberattacks and data loss are discussed in terms of "when" and not "if," this portion of the presentation will address a lawyer's ethical and legal obligations to take competent and reasonable measures to safeguard client information and duty to protect confidential information.

DEI: Last year we discussed the USSC decision in Student for Fair Admissions, which struck down affirmative action in higher education admissions, and how that decision might impact corporate DEI programs. This year, we'll update you on recent cases and trends impacting such programs, and how companies are walking the tightrope of valuing diversity and inclusion while ensuring they don't become the target of reverse discrimination claims.
