

KANSAS LEGISLATIVE INSIGHTS NEWSLETTER | FEBRUARY 2, 2024

TAX VETO UPDATE

Last Friday, Gov. Laura Kelly vetoed the tax package based on her opposition to the flat tax. Next week, the House will be the first chamber to vote on overriding her veto. The House is expected to successfully override the veto again. The drama will be in the Senate, where it appears Republicans need to secure one more vote to reach the necessary 27 votes. This week, the Senate Assessment and Taxation Committee held hearings on the governor's tax package. House Republicans are wearing 310K buttons denoting the number of Kansans who would not be paying state income tax under the Republican plan vetoed by the governor.

WORKERS COMPENSATION COMPROMISE

One of the biggest stories of the week is that business and labor reached a compromise on updating the Kansas workers compensation law. The negotiations lasted nearly a year. During a joint meeting of the Senate Commerce and House Commerce, Labor and Economic Development Committees, attorneys for each side explained the details and answered questions. SB 430 raises the caps on compensation claims while limiting administrative costs for employers. This is a summary provided by the Kansas Department of Labor. The statutes have not been updated since 2011.

WEEKLY OVERVIEW

Monday, Sen. Caryn Tyson and seven other Republican senators introduced a resolution blocking the pay raise for legislators recommended by the special pay commission.

Tuesday, the House Appropriations Committee heard discussion on funding for the 2026 World Cup. The Senate Ways and Means Committee was also briefed on the topic.

Wednesday, the Senate failed to muster the necessary votes to pull the resolution stopping the legislative pay increase from committee. The Senate vote was 21-3, which fell three votes short of the 24 votes needed. Sen. Caryn Tyson, R-Parker, led the effort, arguing it was too much and could be used for better purposes. Under the recommendations of the independent pay commission, the average compensation will increase from approximately $29,000 to $57,000 effective Jan. 1, 2025. If Sen. Tyson's effort would have gotten 24 votes, it would have still needed 27 to procedurally move the resolution to the debate agenda for floor debate. This failed effort means that the pay increase will go into effect Jan. 1, 2025.

Thursday, the House of Representatives overwhelmingly approved removing the 15% statutory cap on alternative investments for the Kansas Public Employees Retirement System (KPERs) 113-3. KPERs staff noted alternative investments are currently hovering around 13% of the system's total investments. Under the provisions of HB 2103, the KPERs board establishes the alternative investment percentage. Alternative investments would include private equity and infrastructure investments.

Thursday committee action saw the House Elections Committee hear HB 2559, prohibiting use of generative artificial intelligence (AI) to create false representation of candidates in election campaign media. It is a bipartisan approach to the issue by House Elections Committee Chair Rep. Pat Proctor, R-Leavenworth, and House Minority Leader Vic Miller, D-Topeka. The measure would require campaigns to disclose when "synthetic media" is used to manipulate images, video, or audio. The bill would specifically ban use of AI to impersonate an election official for the purpose of deceiving someone about how to vote. Two election experts from the Brennan Center for Justice described the challenges and concerns over the quality of deepfakes and synthetic media misleading voters. Among the examples given were fake robocalls using artificial intelligence to replicate President Joe Biden's voice discouraging New Hampshire voters from voting in last month's presidential primary. Last summer, Republican presidential candidate Ron DeSantis' campaign posted fake photos of former president Donald Trump hugging Anthony Fauci.

Friday saw three joint House and Senate committees meet: Joint Committee on Rules and Regulations, Legislative Post Audit, and Bob Bethel Joint Committee on Home and Community Based Services and KanCare Oversight.

NEXT WEEK

The veto override efforts will be center stage next week. There will be hearings on SB 430 with the workers' compensation hearings. The compromise is expected to move quickly through the process.

On Monday, the House and Senate Commerce Committees will again meet jointly to review HB 2570, outlining changes to the unemployment statutes. Next Thursday, the Senate Federal and State Affairs Committee will hear SB 375 on the use of artificial intelligence in election campaigns.

JANUARY REVENUE

The Kansas Department of Revenue reported total state tax revenue for January was 6.5% below the estimates. Total tax collections for the month were $928 million. Corporate income tax collections were the largest category reflecting decline. January corporate revenue was $89.8 million, which was $25.2 million (or 21.9%) below the estimates. Corporate figures are down 45.9% when compared with January of 2023. Individual income tax collections were 3.9% below the estimates. For fiscal year 2024, revenue has failed to exceed the estimates in five of the seven months. Collections were $64.1 million below estimates last month. Total tax collections also were down 11.3% from January 2023.
