

KANSAS LEGISLATIVE INSIGHTS NEWSLETTER | JANUARY 28, 2022

January 28, 2022

WEEKLY OVERVIEW

This week, the Legislature focused on the high-profile issues of economic development, Congressional reapportionment, identity theft, and the food sales tax. Monday, the House Redistricting Committee passed the Ad Astra 2 map approved by the Senate last Friday. Tuesday, the Congressional map was debated on the House floor for four hours. Wednesday, the map passed the House on final action 79-37. We expect Gov. Laura Kelly will veto the Ad Astra 2 bill. The key to any veto override effort will be the availability of legislators. Recently, illness has caused 7 to 10 House members to miss floor votes. The required number of votes in the Kansas Senate is 27 and 84 in the Kansas House of Representatives. The leaders in both chambers are optimistic they will have enough votes to override a gubernatorial veto.

A catchy new acronym has originated from the 2022 session. "APEX" is the new term. It refers to the mega-economic-development bill named Attracting Powerful Economic Expansion Act. On Tuesday afternoon, the Senate Commerce Committee heard that Kansas is one of two states in contention for a potential $4 billion manufacturing plant projected to generate 4,000 jobs. The Department of Commerce has advised the Legislature that the state's final bid would need to be submitted in early February with the necessary tax incentives to win the bid. Kansas Chamber of Commerce lobbyist Eric Stafford expressed support for the bill, noting the Kansas gross domestic product is lagging behind other states. Stafford also notes that Kansas continues to lose young adults moving to other states for job opportunities. The Chamber believes the bill is a potential catalyst to reverse these trends. The unnamed company is projected to add $2.5 billion annually to the Kansas economy. Tuesday evening, the Senate Commerce Committee passed the APEX bill. Thursday afternoon, the Kansas Senate debated and approved the bill 32-7.

Tuesday, the House Taxation Committee conducted hearings on two tax measures cutting the sales tax on food. HB 2484 exempts food and food ingredients, including products sold at restaurants, from sales and compensating use tax effective Jan. 1, 2023. The fiscal impact on state revenue is projected to be $319 million in 2023, rising to nearly $800 million in fiscal year 2025. HB 2352 would exempt the food sales tax effective July 1, 2022. food would still be subject to sales tax, but HB 2478 exempts sales tax on farm products sold at farmers' markets. This bill's fiscal note projects a 2023 state revenue loss of $442.9 million and $501.6 million in 2025. The impact on local sales tax was an issue during the hearings. HB 2484 leaves the local sale tax unchanged. HB 2487 would decrease local sales tax revenue. The cities and counties urged the committee to not reduce the local sales tax to avoid shifting the tax burden to property taxes.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Wednesday, the Senate Judiciary Committee addressed the ongoing issue of identity theft by hearing SB 300. SB 300 would amend the Kansas Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act (RICO) to redefine "racketeering activity" to include identity theft or identity fraud, recruiting criminal gang membership, and criminal gang intimidation. Sen. Mike Petersen testified that SB 300 would allow law enforcement to investigate individuals who may be financing and/or organizing identity theft and fraud but not actually committing the crime themselves. Those convicted could be subject to a sentence of 2-5 years.

Wednesday, the Senate Utilities Committee heard SB 323, establishing requirements for instruments that convey a wind or solar lease or easement. In addition, the bill would require certain disclosures be provided to landowners regarding these leases or easements. Thursday, the committee heard SB 324, establishing procedures to void or terminate leases or easements for electricity generation using wind or solar energy resources.

In addition, this week the Senate Local Government Committee heard testimony from proponents and opponents on SB 325. SB 325 provides that within 90 days after the county has approved a resolution rezoning a parcel of property for the purpose of building a wind or solar facility, 10% or more of the qualified electors of the rezoned property may submit a protest petition of the rezoning.

Tuesday and Wednesday, the Senate Public Health and Welfare Committee considered SB 381. The proposed bill would require pharmacists to dispense medications prescribed for the prevention and treatment of COVID-19 infections, including but not limited to hydroxychloroquine sulfate (FDA-approved to treat malaria) and ivermectin (typically used against parasites in animals). The bill would also create a civil-liability waiver for healthcare providers and pharmacists dispensing medications and prohibit the Board of Pharmacy from taking disciplinary action against a pharmacist for complying with such dispensing. The waiver for civil liability would be retroactive to the beginning of the pandemic (March 12, 2020). The bill would require licensing boards for prescribers and pharmacists to go back and review all disciplinary actions for acts occurring from March 12, 2020.

During Wednesday's hearing, Sen. Mark Steffen, MD, revealed that he is under investigation by the Board of Healing Arts after prescribing ivermectin to COVID patients. He is seeking authority to allow doctors the ability to treat COVID patients by prescribing ivermectin and hydroxychloroquine without fear of reprimand. The bill requires pharmacists to fill prescriptions for the off-label use of ivermectin and hydroxychloroquine even though the FDA says the drugs are ineffective in treating COVID and could be harmful.

Testifying medical directors from across the state pointed out risks and concerns if the bill passed.

NEXT WEEK

State agency budget proposals will be heard and voted on by standing committees and budget subcommittees next week. Monday, Jan. 31, 2022, is the deadline for legislators to request individual bills be drafted. Next week's Senate calendar includes hearings on the regulation of autonomous motor vehicles, Senate food sales tax-cut proposals, a 4.75% flat income tax for individuals, year-round fireworks sales, and a racetrack gaming bill. The House Commerce, Labor, and Economic Development Committee has scheduled three days of hearings on the House version of APEX (HB 2497). The House Taxation Committee will hear SB 318, providing sales-tax exemption for reconstruction fencing supplies used to repair wildfire damage.

The House Health and Human Services Committee will vote on HB 2463, prohibiting changes to the medical-assistance program and requiring extension of the current medical-assistance program. HB 2463 would also prevent any state agency from making any substantive or material change to the medical-assistance program. The current program would be extended through Dec. 31, 2025. The bill requires the Kansas Department of Health and Environment (KDHE) to negotiate and take actions necessary to extend contracts with current managed-care organizations through Dec. 31, 2025.
