

NEWS

SORENSEN RECOGNIZED BY THE BUSINESS JOURNALS AS NATIONAL LEGAL INFLUENCER

Foulston Siefkin partner Harvey Sorensen has been selected to The Business Journals' Influencers: Law list. The list identifies 100 attorneys who are impacting communities across the nation in business and legal matters. The attorneys were spotlighted by editors and staff writers throughout The Business Journals' national network as legal resources for entrepreneurs and companies that are looking to further develop businesses in their current locations or expand into new cities.

From The Business Journal's announcement:

"Harvey Sorensen has built a four-decade career in handling cases that have shaped the business community of Wichita and across Kansas. Working for the state's biggest law firm, he's served as counsel to both buyers and sellers in numerous M&A deals. He's also provided counsel on matters of taxation and other points of corporate governance."

Sorensen received his J.D. from Northwestern University where he graduated cum laude, his M.S. from Boston College, and his B.A. from Beloit College. Throughout his career, his involvement as founder of the Wichita Downtown Development Corporation, chairman of Visioneering Wichita, and chairman of the Wichita Regional Chamber of Commerce has made him an influential force in Wichita's community.

View The Business Journals' official publication here.