PROFILE

Clayton Kaiser is a member of Foulston's healthcare practice group and head of the firm's appellate law team. Clayton focuses on successfully representing clients both inside and outside the healthcare industry in a wide range of legal matters. His experience includes enforcement of employment agreements, contract disputes, challenges to corporate reorganizations, and tort actions. Drawing upon his experience before entering private practice, Clayton also advises and guides clients through federal, state, and private insurance investigations and audits.

Prior to joining Foulston, Clayton served as a law clerk to Judge Consuelo M. Callahan of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit and Judge Eric F. Melgren of the United States District Court for the District of Kansas, which provided him with front-line insight into the operations of the federal courts. Clayton uses this knowledge to craft creative strategies and arguments that put his clients in a strong position to resolve their disputes timely and effectively.

In addition to this time with the federal judiciary, Clayton was privileged to serve more than four years in the United States Air Force Judge Advocate General's (JAG) Corps. While on active duty, Clayton acquired substantial trial experience through litigation of more than 30 courts-martial, many of which involved serious felony-level offenses. He additionally acted as a legal advisor to the Criminal Investigation Task Force, a multi-service organization responsible for investigating acts of terrorism and related offenses against United States personnel or interests.

Outside his legal practice, Clayton and his wife stay busy following and shuttling their eight children to various activities in and around Wichita.
