PROFILE

Sarah Otto is an associate with Foulston's litigation and employment practice group in the firm's Kansas City office. Sarah's practice includes employment disputes, commercial litigation, and data-privacy counseling.

Sarah serves a wide range of clients in contract disputes, including global, regional, and local businesses. She represents businesses and employees in disputes involving breach of noncompete, nonsolicitation, and nondisclosure agreements. Sarah defends employers in litigation and administrative charges and helps employers review and develop employment policies with the goal of avoiding costly litigation. She is also a frequent contributor to the Midwest Employment Law Letter and the Kansas Employment Law Blog.

In her data-privacy counseling practice, Sarah helps clients understand, prepare for, and respond to data-protection challenges. She reviews and drafts privacy and data-security policies to help minimize potential legal exposure. Sarah also assists clients in responding to data-security breach incidents and determining data-breach notification and disclosure obligations.

Sarah received her J.D. from the University of Kansas School of Law, where she honed her writing and advocacy skills by participating in three national moot court competitions and serving as an associate editor of the Kansas Law Review. Before attending KU, Sarah was a K-State Wildcat and competed nationally in collegiate policy debate.

In her free time, Sarah enjoys playing tennis, going to art museums, and walking her golden retriever.
